There is a small deer that lives in the forests of Northeast Asia. The male deer produces a scent called 'musk' that it uses for attracting females and also marking its territory to stop other male deer coming near.

Unfortunately, the musk smell became very popular around the world. It is very rare and very expensive, so perfume companies hunted the musk deer to get this highly desired scent. Due to this, musk deer have become endangered and face the possibility of extinction.

It may be too late to save the musk deer, but nowadays companies are using artificial musk aromas made in laboratories instead of hunting the musk deer. The product has remained popular and the deer don't need to be killed to satisfy the demand for musk.

It is a common belief that after undergoing surgery you should rest for a certain period before returning to your usual daily routine. Depending on how serious the surgery was, some people are advised to rest for up to a year before returning to work

The benefit of this is that injuries are given time to heal and muscles are given time to get strong again. Also, returning to work too soon can result in further injuries to the area of the body that was operated on.

On the other hand, when it comes to things like knee or elbow surgeries, resting is rarely as helpful as people believe. Resting for too long can make it even more difficult and painful to move than before the surgery. So, exercising little by little is usually better in the long run.

Mosquitoes can spread many different diseases very far in a short period of time. One disease called malaria affects millions of people every year. The mosquitoes bite one person with malaria, then carry that blood to another person and infect them with malaria. Scientists invented a chemical that is very effective at killing mosquitoes. Since the 1950s, this chemical has been used to kill large numbers of mosquitoes and reduce the spread of malaria.

However, the cost of this method is very high and third world countries cannot afford to keep using the chemical. In addition to this, it is very bad for the environment and affects other creatures along with the mosquitoes.

The number of children who are homeschooled has increased rapidly over recent years. Religion is one of the biggest factors when a parent decides to teach their child at home, however the quality of the school environment and teaching are also reasons that many parents give.

In Germany, it is illegal to homeschool your child for religious reasons. The government believes that going to school is an important social experience that a child should have. So, no matter the parents' policies on homeschooling, most children attend school every day.

However, many parents ignore these laws and homeschool their children anyway. Although they get to provide the education they want their child to receive, some are forced to pay high fines or even go to prison if caught.

More and more people are joining local gyms lately, but the reasons are different to what you might expect. Rather than joining because they want to get healthier and stronger, people are using gyms for the purpose of meeting new friends.

It is a place to chat and socialize with other adults away from the workplace. Taking turns on the exercise machines is a good way to start a conversation with someone. You also know that you both enjoy going to a gym, so you have something to talk about straightaway.

On the other hand, gym membership fees have been increasing due to the rising cost of living. This means that despite it being a great place to make new friends, it is a very expensive method for doing so.
