The vast range of entertainment choices available nowadays is mind-blowing. Whatever your taste, you can find a myriad of different options to choose from, especially when it comes to the visual arts. From documentaries on ancient torture methods to modern horror films, if you enjoy being horrified by frightening experiences then there is so much out there for you.

Interestingly, the people who enjoy such entertainment actually feel quite serene while watching horrific or violent content. They are able to detach themselves from the reality of what's being shown and find being scared to be a pleasurable form of entertainment.

Not everyone, though, is able to watch violence and cruelty and detach themselves from the experience. For example, young children are not adept at judging how dangerous the situation is. That's why when a parent gets angry with them, they will quickly feel frightened and cry, despite the lack of tangible danger in that moment. And although maturity brings with it the skills to deal with these situations, many adults continue to be scared of horror films their whole life.
