During my trip to New York, I had dinner at a fancy restaurant. The meal was delicious, and I felt very satisfied. When the bill came, I remembered that tipping is important in the United States. However, I wasn't sure how much to tip. I had heard that 15-20% was standard, but I wasn't confident in my math skills.

Nervous, I decided to play it safe and leave a generous tip. I ended up leaving $50 on a $100 bill. Later, I realized that I had tipped 50%, much more than necessary. My friends laughed and told me that I had overpaid. Embarrassed, I learned to be more careful with tipping and to always double-check my calculations.

During a party in Tokyo, my Western friend John and my Japanese friend Hiro were chatting. John said, "Guess how much I paid for my new car? $50,000! It's the best!" Everyone was impressed.

Then Hiro said, "Oh, that's interesting. Guess how much I paid for my house?" Everyone waited curiously. "It was half price! Why? Because two years ago, someone died there!" He smiled proudly.

John was shocked and asked, "Are you serious?" Hiro nodded enthusiastically. "Yes! It's a real bargain!"

The room burst into laughter. We realized that while Westerners might boast about spending big, Asians often pride themselves on finding the best deals, even if the reasons are unusual.

When considering getting a dog, many people wonder if they should buy one from a pet shop or adopt one from an animal shelter. Most people suggest adopting from a shelter. The reason is that it saves poor dogs in need of homes. Plus, it' s usually free.

However, not everyone can adopt a dog from a shelter. There are rules: single people, elderly individuals, and those who have never had a pet before might not be able to adopt one in this way. Despite these restrictions, more people are choosing to adopt from shelters. They feel good knowing they are giving a dog a second chance at a happy life.

Gambling can be very addictive. Many people criticize those who become addicted, but not everyone is affected. It seems that this difference is due to how the brain works and the environment in which a person grows up.

Some people's brains release more dopamine, a chemical that makes them feel good when they gamble. Others might have grown up in environments where gambling was common or accepted. These factors can make them more likely to become addicted.

Even though some people are more at risk, it's important to understand that addiction is a complex issue. It's not just about willpower; it's also about biology and environment.
